

Decision of the US District Court for the Southern District of New York in the TriZetto re-trial

Paris, France – March 28, 2026 – Atos Group notes that on 27 March 2026 the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York issued its pre-judgment decision in the litigation between Syntel and Cognizant and its subsidiary TriZetto.

The Court ordered Syntel to pay 236,9 million dollars (204,1 million euros¹) to Cognizant/TriZetto. This amount is composed as follows:

- In this decision, the judge confirmed the jury's findings, delivered on 30 June 2025, of compensatory damages of US $69,977,813.
- The Court also reduced the previously awarded punitive damages to US $139,955,626 (2x compensatory damages), subject to TriZetto's acceptance of the reduction (failing which a new trial on punitive damages will be ordered). The Court further awarded US $12,395,484.50 in attorneys' fees, in addition to the US $14,548,992.98 in attorneys' fees previously ordered.

The Court also awarded pre-judgment interest on compensatory damages (which will be added to the US $236.9 million) under the New York statutory rate of 9% accruing from January 9, 2018.

The Court has ordered TriZetto to file a letter by 10 April 2026 stating whether it accepts the reduced punitive damages award, and the parties to confer and file a proposed form of judgment by the same date.

This decision marks a new stage in proceedings that originated in 2015 between Syntel and TriZetto, before Atos Group acquired Syntel in 2018. Atos Group will now review the decision in detail and reserves its right to appeal.

Atos Group confirms that this decision does not have a material adverse impact on the assets, business, liquidity or financial condition of the Atos Group.
